Property Description

Rarely does a home in one of McLean's most sought-after school pyramids combine genuine walkability to downtown, a flat and fully usable lot, and a head-to-toe design-driven renovation that discerning buyers spend years searching for. Renovated beginning in 2013, 1502 Linden Hurst Avenue is that home — a 5-bedroom, 4.5-bath colonial set on a quiet, residential street steps from downtown McLean's shops and restaurants, offering approximately 4,906 square feet of finished living across three levels with a garden-level walkout. A grand two-story entry foyer sets the tone from the moment you arrive, with 9.5-foot ceilings on both the main and upper levels creating an openness that is rare in this market. Beyond the primary bedrooms, a dedicated private office and a separate bonus room provide the kind of flexible above-grade living space that discerning buyers are actively searching for. What separates this home from the merely-updated category is not simply that materials were replaced — it is that they were curated. The Capital Culinarian range, 8" solid wood white oak plank floors spanning two full levels, Restoration Hardware lighting throughout, and a fully built-out two-car garage reflect a homeowner who understood that quality and design work together, and that the difference shows.

A quiet street with rare walkability and a flat, private lot. Linden Hurst Ave sits in the Bryn Mawr sub-enclave of downtown McLean — one of the very few residential pockets in 22101 genuinely walkable to the village center, on a quiet residential street with only incidental neighborhood traffic. The 0.29-acre lot is flat and fully usable, beautifully landscaped with mature plantings.

MARKET CONTEXT

McLean 22101 Market Overview

This Market Data Book is intended to supplement the traditional comparable-sales approach by presenting independent market evidence derived from the Virginia Department of Taxation, Bright MLS, and historical transaction analysis. Together, these datasets provide additional objective context regarding current market conditions and valuation trends within McLean 22101.

McLean (ZIP code 22101) is one of Northern Virginia's premier luxury residential markets, characterized by established neighborhoods, larger residential lots, highly regarded public schools, proximity to Washington, D.C., and relatively low housing turnover. Because comparable homes transact infrequently, there are often few recent sales that closely match a subject property's location, size, quality, and characteristics.

Analysis of 299 closed detached sales in McLean 22101 shows 20.7% of homes sold above their original list price, with an average premium of 5.22% among those sales — confirming an active, seller-favoring market segment for well-positioned properties. See Appendix A for full detail.

Assessment-to-Sales Ratio Analysis

The Assessment-to-Sales Ratio (ASR) method provides an independent, comparable-sales-free estimate of market value by applying the relationship between assessed values and actual sale prices across a verified sample of transactions.

OFFICIAL FAIRFAX COUNTY BENCHMARK

The Commonwealth's 2024 Assessment-to-Sales Ratio Study analyzed 11,264 verified residential sales throughout Fairfax County.

Metric	Value
Fairfax County ASR	87.49%
Subject Assessment	$1,760,520
Implied Market Value	≈ $2.01M

See Appendix B for full source detail.

MCLEAN 22101 — MLS SALE-TO-LIST PRICE EVIDENCE

The following data is drawn from Bright MLS covering closed detached sales in McLean ZIP code 22101 over the prior 12-month period. It provides supplemental context regarding market competitiveness and pricing dynamics. The McLean 22101 MLS ratio (83.05%) is more market-specific than the countywide Fairfax figure (87.49%). Both implied values fall within the range indicated by the comparable sales analysis in Part 2.

METRIC	RESULT
Closed detached 22101 sales reviewed	299
Sales above original list price	62

METRIC	RESULT
Share above original list price	20.7%
Average premium among above-list sales	5.22%
Median premium among above-list sales	2.99%

This data supports the view that the McLean 22101 market rewards well-positioned, move-in-ready homes with above-list outcomes in approximately one in five transactions. The subject property's renovation quality, walkability, and school pyramid positioning place it favorably within this competitive segment.
